

INTERACTION

The Interaction Capability System™

A 90-second overview...for busy people

What this is

This catalogue outlines Interaction's capability programs delivered through the Interaction Capability System™ – an integrated approach to strengthening leadership judgement, behaviour and performance in complex environments.

This is not a list of standalone training courses. It is a structured capability system designed to address the underlying drivers of performance, governance and organisational risk.

Why it matters

In complex environments, capability gaps rarely appear as simple training needs. They show up as:

- inconsistent decision-making
- leadership misalignment
- cultural drift
- governance and delivery risk

Traditional training does not address these system-level challenges.

Organisations require structured, evidence-informed capability approaches that strengthen behaviour, judgement and performance over time.

How to use this catalogue

Organisations typically use this catalogue to:

- identify targeted capability interventions
- design structured leadership or workforce pathways
- respond to performance, governance or cultural risks
- build capability aligned to strategy and operating context

Programs can be used as:

- standalone interventions
- structured cohort-based pathways
- organisation-wide capability uplift initiatives
- nationally recognised qualification pathways

How the system works

Diagnostics → Coaching → Programs → Capability pathways → System-wide impact

The Interaction Capability System™ integrates behavioural science, leadership development and operational capability to produce observable behavioural shift and sustained performance improvement.

What makes Interaction different

- Evidence-informed and neuroscience-based design
- Focus on behaviour and judgement, not just knowledge
- Integration across diagnostics, coaching and programs
- Designed for complex, high-accountability environments
- Aligned to public sector and governance contexts

The Interaction Capability System™

Strategic Capability Program Catalogue

Capability where performance and risk intersect

This catalogue shows how organisations can access structured capability programs and pathways through the Interaction Capability System™.

Interaction designs and delivers structured capability programs and development pathways that strengthen judgement, leadership behaviour and system performance in complex organisational environments.

We work with organisations where performance, governance and public trust depend on strong leadership judgement and behavioural consistency.

In complex systems, capability gaps rarely present as simple training needs. They appear as decision inconsistency, cultural drift, governance risk and stalled performance.

Our programs are designed to address these underlying capability drivers by strengthening the behaviours, leadership disciplines and decision frameworks that enable organisations to operate with confidence, integrity and sustained performance.

Programs described in this catalogue represent capability interventions delivered through the Interaction Capability System™.

The Interaction Capability System™

The Interaction Capability System™ is Interaction's evidence-informed framework for strengthening organisational capability in complex environments.

Rather than treating learning as isolated training events, the Interaction Capability System™ integrates behavioural science, leadership development and operational capability to strengthen judgement, leadership behaviour and organisational performance.

The system focuses on four interconnected capability domains.

- Behavioural foundations and workplace integrity
- Performance, decision and delivery capability
- Strategic and adaptive leadership
- Nationally recognised capability pathways

Together these domains form a capability architecture that strengthens judgement, leadership behaviour and delivery performance across individuals, teams and leadership systems.

Evidence-based, always

All Interaction programs are grounded in contemporary behavioural science, neuroscience and organisational research.

This includes evidence drawn from areas such as:

- cognitive science and decision-making
- neuroscience of learning and behaviour change
- psychological safety and team dynamics
- behavioural economics and influence
- leadership and organisational systems research

Rather than focusing on participation alone, our programs are designed to produce observable behavioural shift, strengthening judgement, improving leadership practice and supporting more disciplined decision-making in complex environments.

Learning design incorporates principles such as:

- cognitive load management
- experiential and applied learning
- reflection and behavioural reinforcement
- practical application to real organisational challenges

This evidence-informed approach ensures capability development translates into meaningful workplace impact rather than short-term training experiences.

How to use this catalogue

This catalogue provides a comprehensive overview of Interaction's capability programs delivered through the Interaction Capability System™.

The catalogue highlights our existing capability programs. Interaction also designs fully bespoke capability solutions aligned to organisational strategy and operational context.

Organisations use this catalogue to:

- identify targeted capability interventions addressing behavioural or performance risks
- design structured leadership development pathways
- support workforce capability uplift and succession planning
- respond to governance, performance or cultural challenges
- strengthen decision-making and delivery capability in complex environments

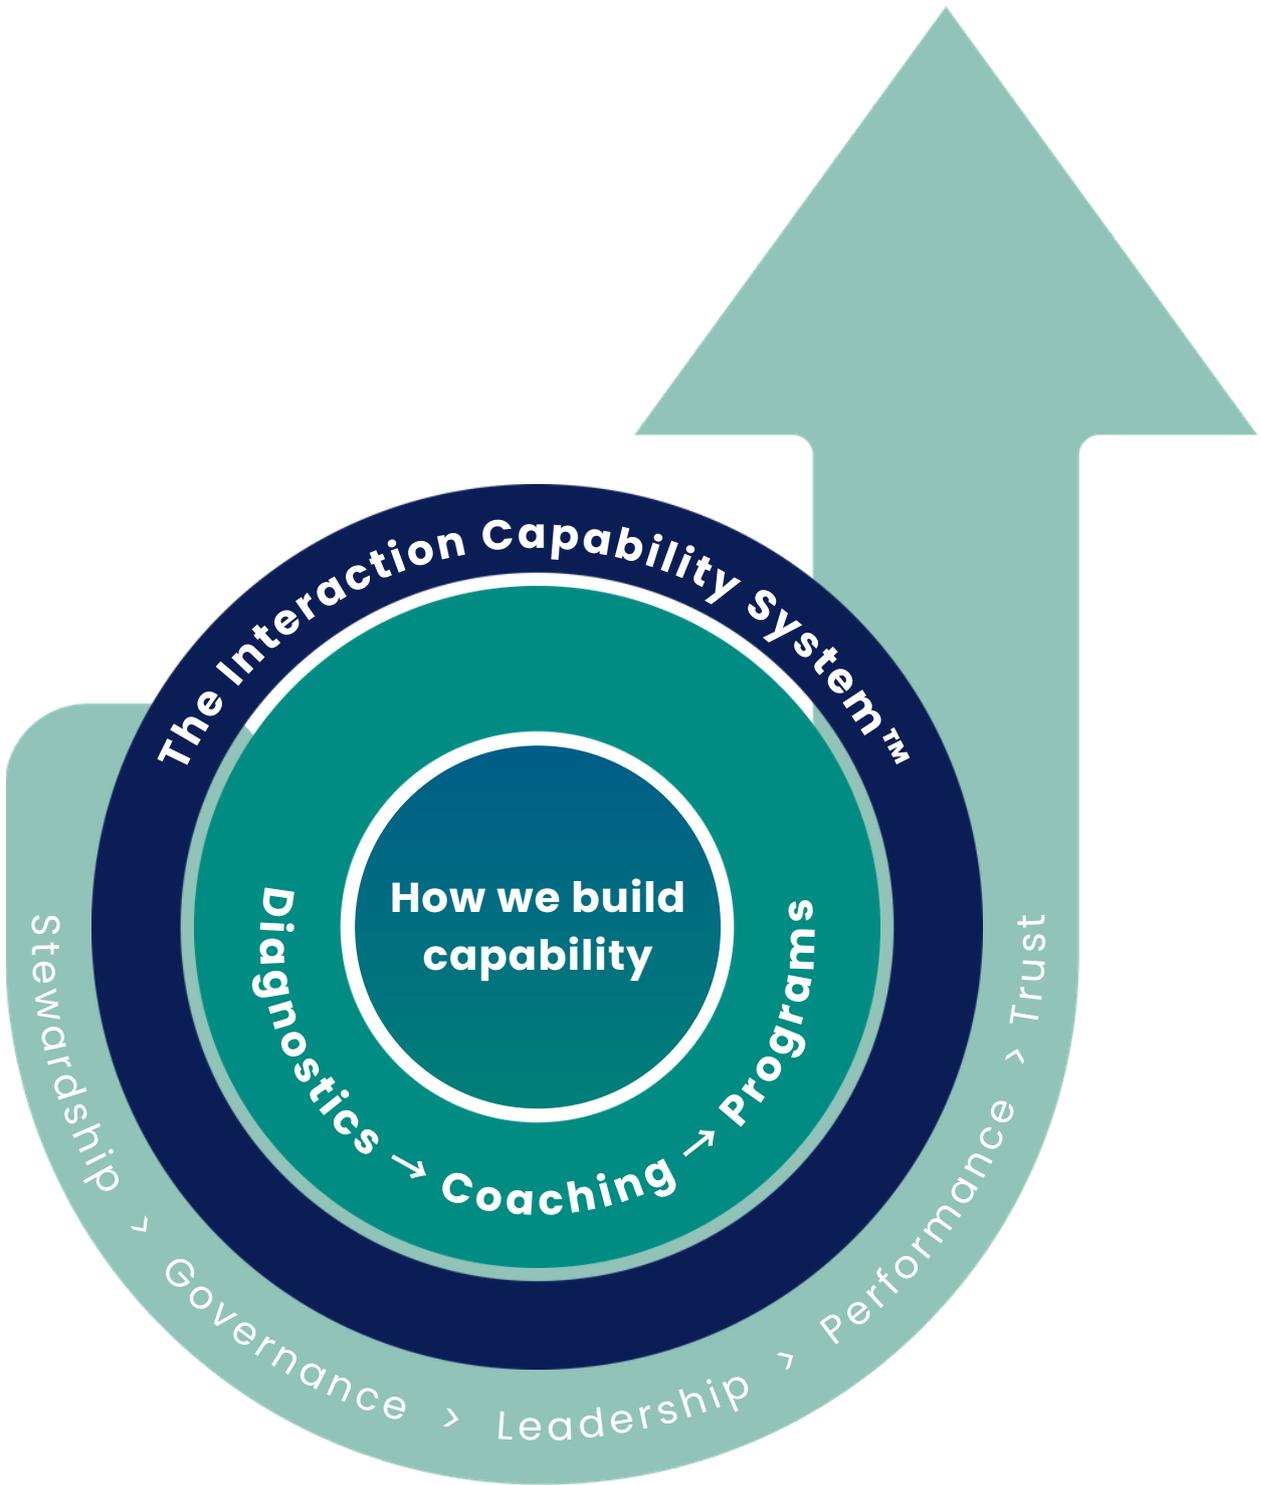

Within each domain you will find:

- a description of the capability focus
- a list of programs within that domain
- detailed summaries outlining the purpose and focus of each program

Programs can be delivered as:

- stand-alone capability programs
- structured cohort development pathways
- tailored organisational capability initiatives
- nationally recognised qualification pathways

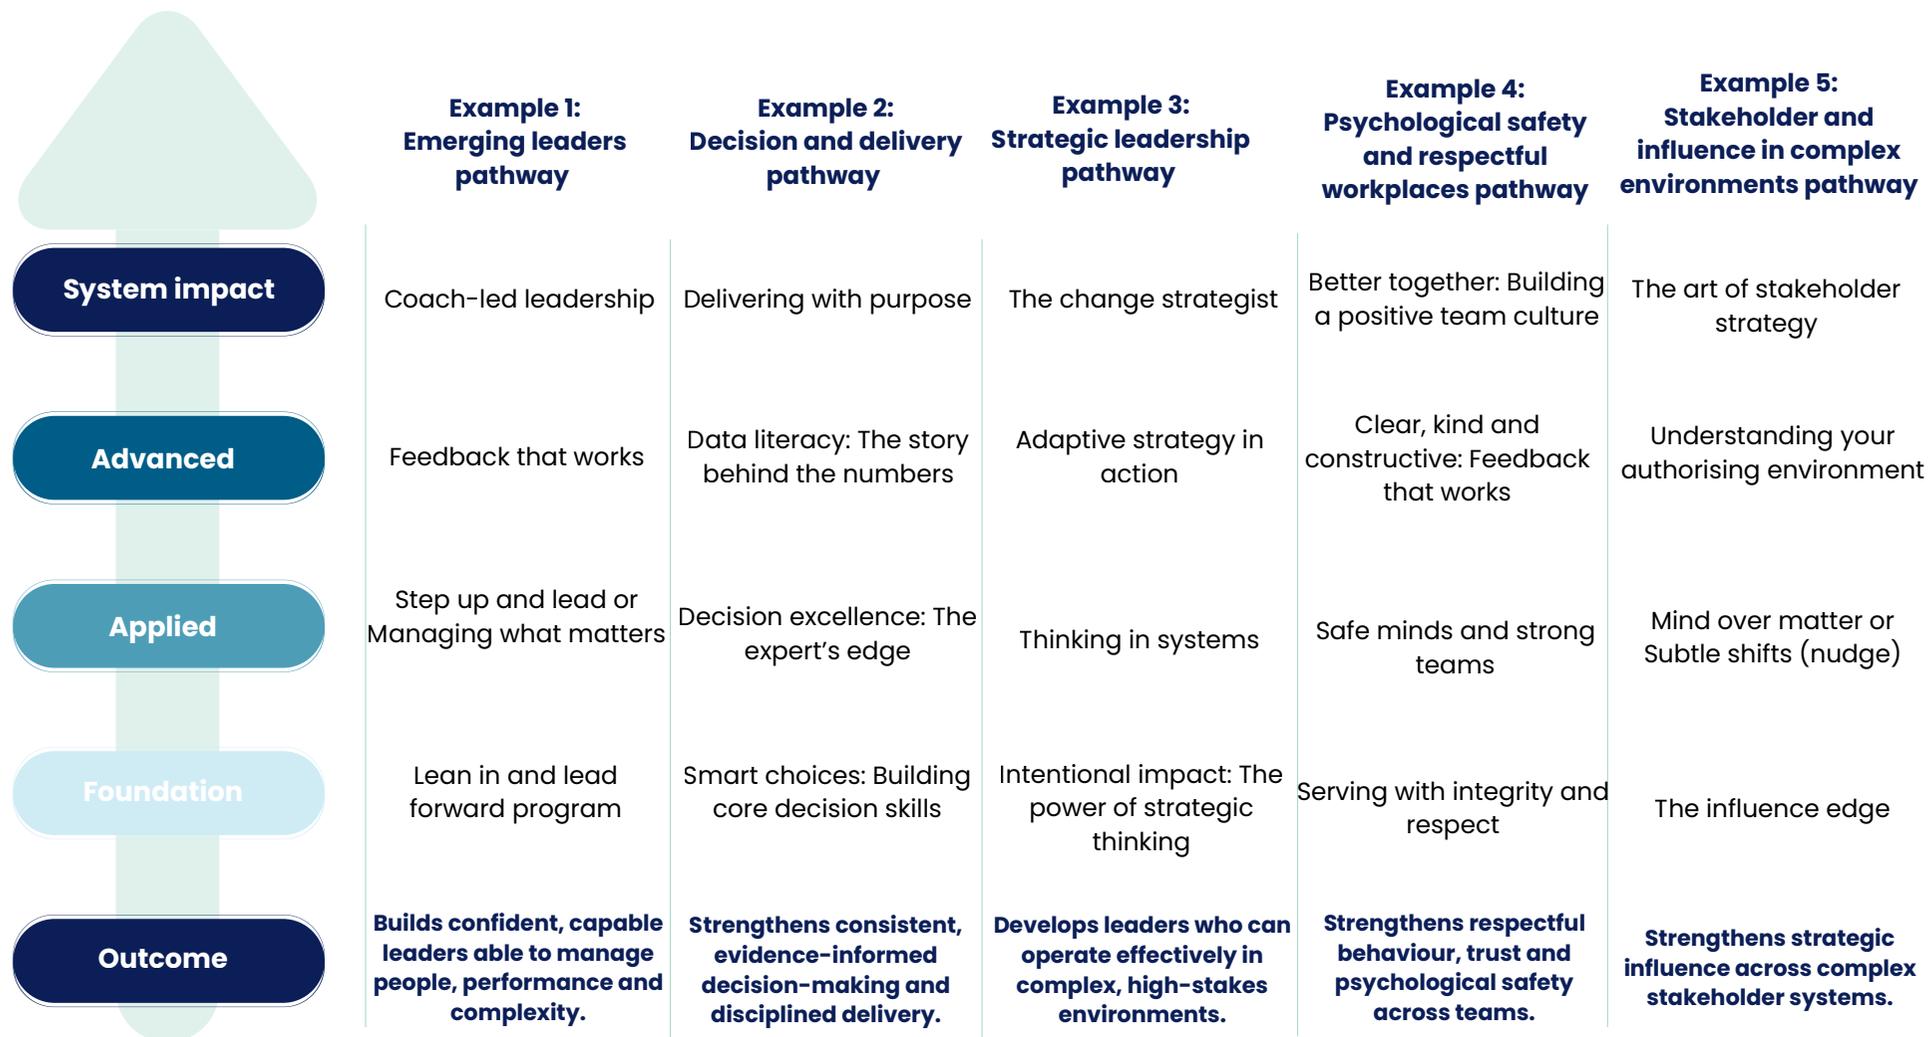

The Interaction Capability System™ integrates diagnostics, coaching and structured programs to strengthen judgement, leadership behaviour and organisational performance.

Diagnostics identify risk and behavioural patterns, coaching supports refinement, and structured programs build sustained capability and performance.

Structured capability pathways

Capability is most effectively developed through structured, staged learning rather than isolated programs. Interaction designs standalone programs and capability pathways that build progressively across roles, levels and organisational priorities. Programs are designed as modular building blocks that can be combined into structured capability pathways aligned to roles, levels and organisational priorities.

Program design and delivery options

Interaction programs delivered through the Interaction Capability System™ can be provided through several design and delivery approaches depending on organisational needs.

Off-the-shelf programs

Our off-the-shelf programs are fully developed capability programs that can be delivered immediately.

These programs address common capability needs such as leadership development, decision-making, stakeholder engagement and workplace behaviour.

A one-off utilisation fee allows Interaction to maintain and regularly update program materials to ensure they remain contemporary and aligned with evolving organisational environments.

Tailored programs

Tailored programs adapt existing capability programs to reflect the organisational context.

Tailoring may include:

- integrating organisational examples or case studies
- incorporating sector-specific language or policy context
- aligning exercises to operational scenarios
- adjusting program emphasis to reflect organisational priorities

This approach combines proven learning design with contextual relevance.

Full design (bespoke capability development)

For complex capability challenges, Interaction designs fully bespoke capability solutions.

These programs may involve:

- organisational capability analysis
- stakeholder consultation

- alignment with leadership frameworks or workforce strategies
- integration with policy, governance or operational priorities

This approach provides maximum customisation and ensures the resulting program aligns precisely with organisational culture and strategic priorities.

Capability domains

Behavioural foundations and workplace integrity

This domain strengthens the behavioural conditions required for trust, psychological safety and ethical decision-making.

Programs in this domain focus on:

- ethical behaviour
- psychological safety
- emotional intelligence
- feedback capability
- personal accountability

These foundations support effective collaboration, learning and leadership.

Performance, decision and delivery capability

This domain builds disciplined judgement and execution capability across policy, operational and service environments.

Programs strengthen capability in:

- decision-making under complexity and scrutiny
- translating strategy and policy into operational outcomes
- data literacy and evidence-informed judgement
- stakeholder engagement and influence
- project and program delivery
- cross-team alignment and accountability

These capabilities reduce delivery risk and strengthen performance integrity.

Strategic and adaptive leadership

This domain develops leaders who can operate effectively within complex systems and changing environments.

Programs strengthen capability in:

- adaptive leadership and systems thinking
- leading through ambiguity and reform
- executive presence and influence
- culture stewardship and behavioural alignment
- governance literacy and board engagement capability
- strategic foresight and long-term capability planning

These programs strengthen organisational resilience and long-term public value.

Nationally recognised capability pathways

In addition to targeted capability programs, Interaction delivers nationally recognised qualifications that provide structured development pathways.

Our Certificate IV in Government and Diploma of Government programs:

- align with public sector capability frameworks
- integrate applied learning with workplace context
- support workforce capability uplift and succession planning
- provide measurable and portable credentials

These pathways enable organisations to embed sustained capability development aligned with governance and performance priorities.

Integrated capability design

Capability architecture is most effective when learning, reflection and behavioural application are integrated.

Programs delivered through the Interaction Capability System™ may include:

- stand-alone targeted interventions
- structured development programs
- tailored organisational capability initiatives
- diagnostic-informed capability uplift
- virtual or in-person delivery
- elearning
- RTO-accredited qualification pathways

We design with rigour to ensure capability development translates into observable behavioural shift.

The Interaction Capability System™ integrates behavioural foundations, operational capability and leadership development to strengthen judgement, leadership behaviour and organisational performance in complex environments.

Strengthen capability where it matters most

Capability challenges rarely sit in isolation. They emerge in how decisions are made, how leaders behave and how teams deliver under pressure.

The Interaction Capability System™ is designed to address these underlying drivers by strengthening behavioural foundations, leadership capability and delivery discipline in an integrated way.

We partner with organisations to:

- strengthen judgement and decision-making in complex environments
- build leadership capability aligned to governance and performance expectations
- improve consistency, accountability and delivery outcomes
- support cultural alignment, trust and behavioural integrity
- design structured capability pathways aligned to organisational priorities.

Flexible delivery aligned to your needs

Programs can be delivered as:

- stand-alone capability interventions
- structured cohort-based development programs
- organisation-wide capability uplift initiatives
- elearning and scalable digital solutions
- nationally recognised qualification pathways

All programs can be delivered in-person or virtually and tailored to reflect your organisational context.

Evidence-informed, always

Our programs are grounded in behavioural science, neuroscience and organisational research, ensuring capability development translates into observable behavioural change and sustained performance improvement.

Let's design the right capability pathway

Whether you are addressing a specific capability gap or designing a broader development pathway, we can help identify the right mix of diagnostics, coaching, programs and delivery approaches for your context.

Detailed program outlines, pathway design options and tailored solutions are available on request.
